Tick rotation - tips for effective chemical use for ticks.

- Cooper's "Exzolt" should be used once per year either at the start or end of the season.
- For long term tick control, rotate between Moxi LA (Neovemox) and Fluarazanon (Oztik or Acatak).
- If available or for cattle that do not have a perceived tick problem, plunge dips should be used in between, or whenever cattle are in the yards. If the same chemical dip has been used for years, consider testing for resistance and test the dip regularly. We are able to supply dip test bottles if needed. If you want to test for tick resistence speak to Rob or Amanda
- The only other tick treatment option is a ML pour on (Imax or Moxistar) but this should not be used after Moxi LA as it has the same active ingredient, sprays are rarely effective as cattle need to be thoroughly wetted.
- ML pour ons should not be used multiple times a year for tick. Rather than this, consider using Oztik or Exzolt in the first instance.

Method 240SL is a new herbicide on the market which introduces a novel active ingredient; "aminocyclopyrachlor", that targets brush & woody weeds.

FEDERAL REGROWTH CLEARING LAWS

Regarding the new Federal Regrowth laws, we have contacted the EPBC to get a better understanding of what we now can and can't do.

So if you plan on clearing (regrowth) that is under 15 years old, you are good to go. Please remember the state laws still apply to the clearing of regrowth as well.

Options include mechanical (dozer), & chemical (tebuthiron), please feel free to contact us to discuss your best options.

If the regrowth is older than 15 years, this does not necessarily mean that you can't clear it. You can conduct a self assessment to see if you are elible to clear regrowth.

The EPBC have sent us a draft self assessment that we can give you on request, they would also like feedback on this self assessment.

Please call Michael for further information.
